YALE CLUB IS QUIET.

Alumni Accept Victory and Walt for Harvard Game.

Members of the Yale Club did no have their usual celebration last eve ning following their victory over Prince-ton in football. The club was exceed-ingly quiet all evening and members delighted with the success of their football team against Princeton, were ap-parently willing to wait another week in the hope of singing pæns of victory at the close of the Yale-Harvard con-and was expected to come in and clip the end, as he had done on a couple of previous occasions. Instead he circled around the other end for a wide swinging long run. Moose came near getting away and was only pulled down by the clever work of Comerford. Outside of this play and a better executed forward passing attack than attempted against Harvard the offence of Princeton was about the same.

Highley Roes Good Work.

Moseley and Comerford excelled at end, while Highley did some great work for Princeton. These three men were found in every play and especially covering kicks. Moseley and his running partner continually downed the Princeton to put received by Eddy—but then a second guesser is always right.

In the third period Princeton's rally was stopped at the 35 yard mark, where it was led for downs. Again in the fourth period the Tigers were held for downs just when it looked as if they had it call of themselves, but they had to call on little more than brute force. There was very little of the puzzling about the Princeton attack. Le Gore, with a run of twenty-five yards through left tackle in the fourth period. Johnson said the figures given out were misleading

"Instead of only twenty-five players having holdover contracts in the major leagues," he said, "there are probably sixty men in the American League alone whose contracts run over next season, I am not worrying about any possible strike and neither are the owners in our league.
